THE CAUSE OF LABOR.

Designing Politicians Use It in the Hope of Getting Votes.

The Decatur Review seems to have found that its leap into the affair between the management of the street car company and its men with its Democratic ding-dong of "rote against Mills and vote for Webber" is not "pay dirt." That organ's attempt to defend its course is no less ridiculous than its effort to use the labor organizations of the city in the interest of the Democratic candidate. It says its course should be regarded more in the nature of a friendly nod toward Mills than otherwise. The review is trying to elect Mr. Webber for reasons to which the Republican will call attention before the campaign which the Review and Mr. Webber have voluntarily opened for Mr. Webber has ended. These designing Democratic heeler thought they saw in the street car matter a chance to put Mr. Mills at a disadvantage before the labor organizations of the city, and thus help along Webber. Mr. Mills' only offense, which was well known to the Review and these heeler, is that he owns some stock in the street car company. Why did the Review elude out of all the stockholders Mr. Mills if its object was not political—it was not trying to prostitute by an appeal to prejudice the labor organizations of the city to the interests of Webber? Why is it that every Democratic heeler who is in the habit of standing on the street corners daily, doing the dirty work of that party, the day the Review's covert attack was made on Mr. Mills was saying: "This will lose Mills the labor vote," and "This will elect Webber," and other similar remarks? And why is it that Mr. Webber was so much excited all that day?

The whole scheme was operated in the interest of Candidate Webber. The interest of labor was not considered for a moment by these demagogues. Not one of these Democratic heeler expressed a word of concern for the discharged men. They did not care whether one of them ever secured another day's food for his wife and little ones or not. All they were interested in was to turn the affair to the profit of Webber. Webber himself had no concern in the matter, except to turn it to his own political account. Not a touch of sorrow found lodgment in the heart of the discharged men. Not a word of condolence escaped his lips, nor was he philanthropic enough to go to the management of the car line and make a plea for the discharged men. Such a thought never entered his pure political brain. His interest was limited entirely by the number of laboringmen upon whose prejudices he might prey to get their votes. When or how they should get their bread did not concern him.

That is the exact state of the case, and it shows that Mr. Webber and his friends are ready to injure any private business, deceive any class of men and throw the interests of Decatur into chaos, and even enter the sacred precincts of church organizations and dig up prejudices and produce discord there, to get votes.

In the light of these facts the duty of the good people of Macon county, the good people in the churches and the good people belonging to labor organizations is to call a halt on this kind of campaigning by snubbing Mr. Webber under at the polls with such an emphasis that no party will hereafter nominate any man for office on the sole ground that he is believed to be so smooth that he can deceive churches and labor organizations into voting the Democratic ticket. Every man who has ability to think knows that this demagogical attack on Mr. Mills is unwarranted and could not have been made with honest motives. It may be well to add by way of a hint to the political demagogues who are at the bottom of this attack on Mills that it is well known, that for two weeks they have been trying to conjure up something in connection with the parks and Street Car company in order to reach Mills and injure his chances for election, and help Webber's chances.

Webber as a Lie Teller.

Mr. Webber comes forward with great promptness to deny that he referred to the Grand Army men as "the scum of the town," or words to that effect. This is of course not unexpected. A man who could give expression to such a feeling when he is not running for office would of course deny it when he is running for office. But Mr. Webber made the remark just the same, and he knows very well where he can come face to face with the man who heard him say it. He stood face to face with the individual before and is familiar with his whereabouts. Mr. Webber not only did this, but solicited men to leave the order. These references are not made without satisfactory evidence of their truth, nor are they made for the purpose of appealing to the prejudices of Grand Army men, but to show Mr. Webber that the sort of campaign to making any give him trouble. It may be that Mr. Webber was a little aggrieved at the Grand Army people at the time, and in the expression exhibited his well known propensity for giving way to spitefulness. This by the way, was well illustrated in his conduct toward the English Lutheran church soon after he left it. To perfect title it was agreed that the church should be sold under the foreclosure of a certain mortgage, and thus secure a title from the court. Mr. Webber, it seems, took advantage of this condition of things and attempted to get control of the property by organizing a combination to bid the property in, and thus get it away from the church. Mr. Webber was there to bid, but his scheme failed.

This also serves to show his great love for the Lutheran, whose vote he thought he had in his pocket but which have leaked out so suddenly. The love he has for the Lutheran church is precisely the same as his love for the laboringman. His interest for both is compassed by his desire to deceive them into voting the Democratic ticket in his interest.

But Mr. Webber says the Republican has made a malicious attack on his character. This the Republican most emphatically denies. It professes no knowledge of Mr. Webber's character, but anticipating the style of his campaign, it laid in a right valuable supply of material touching his reputation and his public and private acts for use as soon as he should open up the Webberian plan of campaign, which he has done in attempting to turn the street car affair to his political account by attacking Mills.

Omniscience alone is dealing with his character, and this paper is not disposed to interfere.

The trouble with Mr. Webber is that he does on his character and has allowed his reputation and his record to grow a little rusty. Since his nomination he is in the habit of saying to Republicans whose votes he expects to get, that he is not a Democrat in the strict sense of the word and only accepted a nomination from that party in order to raise it to a higher plane; that he don't agree with it on the tariff; that it is not what it should be on that question; that he is an enemy of slavery. George man and an absolute free trader. Now of course a man who does not vote upon his character would have come to the conclusion that he is carrying the Democratic party upon his shoulders to the waters of purification. The fact is, Mr. Webber, after the attack on him, he said to his friends upon the Republican nominee, which was wholly unwarranted, is not in position to complain because a few facts are given out about himself.

BOTH SHOT TO KILL.

Sensational Affair at the Roby Saturday Night—No Arrest.

At the hour of midnight Saturday night two revolvers were discharged in the hall of the Roby, a boarding house on East North street, the reports awakening all of the inmates and sending them to the hall to ascertain the cause. Charles Logan, the young architect, son of Mrs. Dora Logan, the proprietress of the Roby, was found on the floor near the open door of his room, and at first it was believed he was seriously, if not fatally, hurt; but after quiet was restored and an investigation made it was quickly ascertained that Charles was all right and not hurt at all, except by a slight abrasion of the skin on the right side of his neck, which had been caused by the bullet fired at him with murderous intent.

There seems to be considerable mystery in the case. Harry Oldham, bookkeeper at the office of Warren & Darfee, was the last man in the house. He says he was followed from the Syndicate Block by a party whom he did not know and cannot describe. The fellow followed Oldham to the Roby, and going up the steep steps Oldham stumbled and made a noise which was heard in the house by some of the boarders and by Charles Logan whose room is on the first floor at the north end of the long hall. After Oldham had entered and gone to his room on the third floor, a cry was heard in the alley like this: "Charley, Charley, stick your head out of the window." Logan did not hear the cry, but many in the house did. The noise Oldham made aroused Logan, and he came out of his room at the end of the hall with his revolver in hand, not knowing what was going on, but evidently anticipating trouble. As he stepped into the hall, he saw the front door of the outline of the form of a man, and just as he saw the figure a 38-caliber bullet was fired at him. It grazed his neck and lodged in the standing. Instantly Logan fired at his unknown assailant. The 32-caliber bullet went into the wall near the door, and the would-be assassin fled from the house, slamming the door to as he ran. An attempt was made to catch the fellow, but he got away.

For a time the wildest excitement prevailed in the house. Such an incident would naturally stir up a whole town, and it was not surprising that the greatest interest was manifested, and deep solicitude felt for Charles who had such a close call for his life.

There has been no arrest, but the police are working on the case and may nab the guilty party sooner or later. Mr. Logan states that he cannot tell who the man was who fired at him, because he did not see him nor hear his voice. So show Mr. Webber that the sort of campaign to making any give him trouble. It may be that Mr. Webber was a little aggrieved at the Grand Army people at the time, and in the expression exhibited his well known propensity for giving way

ATLANTON WITHDRAWS

Days of the Transcontinental Association Are Numbered.

San Francisco, Sept. 20.—The Atlanton has withdrawn from the Transcontinental Association. A few railroad optimists refused to believe that the association could continue without the Pacific, Canadian Pacific and Northern. The withdrawal of the Atlanton from the association is a blow to the association, and it is expected that the association will be dissolved. The Atlanton was the only competitor of every road now in the association, and none of them would be hampered by restrictions when the Atlanton was in the association. Acting on the withdrawal of the Atlanton, the association met yesterday afternoon to discuss the situation. It was decided to wind up its affairs. On officials refused to tell on the withdrawal of the Atlanton, and even refused to the withdrawal notice itself. The withdrawal of the Atlanton was effective on January 1, 1893. Here's What the Plasterers Think of
ROCK PLASTER.

WE THE UNDERSIGNED, contracting plasterers, after much experience and observation, take pleasure in testifying to the practical character of ROCK PLASTER, and while it will remove a not inconsiderable amount of business, namely that of patching, we advocate its use, as it enables us to do work and guarantee the results, and enables us to carry on our trade at all seasons of the year, and modernizes that part of building enterprise which has undergone practically no improvement in the last two thousand years, placing the business of the plasterer on the same footing as that occupied by the other trades through the advent of machinery and improved methods.

POLITICAL PARAGRAPH
Ever since England adopted free trade the expense for the support of her destitute population has steadily increased.

Deposits in the savings banks of New York city have greatly increased in recent years, showing that wage-earners are prospering under protection.

The school question cannot longer be regarded as a political issue in Illinois, for both parties have pronounced for the unconditional repeal of the much discussed compulsory school law.

A St. Louis democratic paper recently gave two columns to a confederate regiment at New Orleans, and on the same day gave less than a column to the G. A. R. reunion at Springfield.

Consumers are what the producers need. Well paid wage earners are the best consumers, and the farmer is equally interested with the manufacturer in the maintaining of the scale of wages and the home market.

Although every dollar buys more to eat and more to wear than ever before, yet wages are well maintained and the wage-earner is able to buy more comforts for himself and family than ever before.

Ireland enjoys all the blessings of free trade, but her population is lessening, and she is a poorer country than she was before. Ireland is a poor country, where protection is stimulating production and where labor is better rewarded than in the free trade countries.

Dunn's review of trade says that "prices of commodities as a whole have declined three-quarters of 1 per cent. and are now 18 per cent. lower than a year ago. It may be added that wages are maintained and the McKinley bill still in force.

At the opening of the present century the land of England was in the hands of 100,000 land owners. To-day there are less than 30,000 land owners, and the policy of free trade, adopted near the middle of the century, has had to do with this unfortunate change.

Deliberative in its work patient and pursuing in its protected sessions the Illinois republican state convention sought to voice the sentiments of the people it was called to represent. Apparently its work is approved by the lay it press and people of the commonwealth. Now let every republican in the state work untiringly for success in November.

In 1900 the misrepresentation set advent: guarding the McKinley tariff law frightened thousands of republican voters from the polls and led them to vote with the democracy. The predictions made of higher prices for everything the people had to buy have not come true. In this year the vote will be cast and a majority of it will be on the side of republicanism.

Play the DEUCE.

“Gloriana,” a three-act comedy farce by James Mortimer, and acted by one of Mr. Charles Frohman’s selected company of actors, will be the attraction of the opera house this evening. The play is founded upon the French “Le Truc d’Arthur,” and is full of absurd situations growing out of almost endless complications. There is a treacherous widow, and with her a jealous lover. The company is made up of good material, and the performance is one that can be looked back upon with pleasure. There are several actors and actresses whose work stands out with commanding prominence. Miss Henrietta Crossman, who in the widow in the case Mrs. Lovelace or “Gloriana,” is said to be admirable in her treatment of the character, quiet, demure and undemonstrative, but there is something truly fetching in her dreamy downcast eyelids and full destruction to the susceptible male animal in her mildly wicked sideling glance.

The other people in this splendid organization are J. Henley, Charles B. Wells, Joseph Allen, Miss Margaret Robinson, Miss Mary Egan, Edwin Stevens, Thos. A. Wise, Wm. Nelson and others. Manager Haines should be congratulated on getting this original cast and one of the best comedy companies ever in Decatur. The same company will play open and dedicate the new Schiller theatre in Chicago Oct. 17 for a 60 night run.

“Gloriana” To-Night.

“Gloriana,” a three-act comedy farce by James Mortimer, and acted by one of Mr. Charles Frohman’s selected company of actors, will be the attraction of the opera house this evening. The play is founded upon the French “Le Truc d’Arthur,” and is full of absurd situations growing out of almost endless complications. There is a treacherous widow, and with her a jealous lover. The company is made up of good material, and the performance is one that can be looked back upon with pleasure. There are several actors and actresses whose work stands out with commanding prominence. Miss Henrietta Crossman, who in the widow in the case Mrs. Lovelace or “Gloriana,” is said to be admirable in her treatment of the character, quiet, demure and undemonstrative, but there is something truly fetching in her dreamy downcast eyelids and full destruction to the susceptible male animal in her mildly wicked sideling glance.

The other people in this splendid organization are J. Henley, Charles B. Wells, Joseph Allen, Miss Margaret Robinson, Miss Mary Egan, Edwin Stevens, Thos. A. Wise, Wm. Nelson and others. Manager Haines should be congratulated on getting this original cast and one of the best comedy companies ever in Decatur. The same company will play open and dedicate the new Schiller theatre in Chicago Oct. 17 for a 60 night run.

Plans for the Wabash

The new Wabash board will organize in New York next week, at which time the Gould program will be developed. It is believed to contemplate the new cast of the Atlantic seaboard, and the taking in by the Goulds of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, which has the terminal at Hoboken, N. J., and is a shorter route by 31 miles than the New York Central. The president, Samuel Sloan, is already interested in the Wabash. The latter at present relies upon the Vanderbilt system for its connection east of Detroit, but with the Canadian Pacific line to Buffalo, now being built and the Delaware Lackawanna & Western east, the Wabash would be independent of the Vanderbilt route. The election of Messrs. Macrae and Pavy of London to the Wabash Board was in accord with the Canadian Pacific interest and Mr. Van Horn, a director in the latter, would also have been elected. The Wabash Board had been organized. The new line projected from Ogden and Salt Lake City to St. Louis, Chicago, and other points in the West, which is believed to be a Gould movement, the Union and Missouri Pacific connections at the Missouri River, the Wabash to the Canadian border, the Canadian Pacific to Buffalo, and the Lackawanna to New York, a Gould trace continental line from ocean to ocean via St. Louis or Chicago would be an accomplished fact.

Irish Comedy

“My Colleen,” by James A. Burns, author of “Hearts of Oak” will shortly be seen here. “My Colleen” is unlike any of the present Irish dramas, being of an entirely different strain. The author having successfully wandered from the path so often traversed by writers of Irish plays. After the run of business, the engine, police, and ambulance, it is a pleasure to announce the coming of a play which is of the strongest interest full of highly dramatic situations, and depending on legitimate means for effect. Tony Farrell a comedian of exceptional merits, a singer endowed with the magnetism of the older Emmett, will be seen in the leading role of Jerry Doyle, portraying the natural whole soul son of Erin. He is supported by the same company which made his play famous in New York City. Commencement at the Grand Theatre night Sept. 22.

Here's What the Plasterers Think of
ROCK PLASTER.

WE THE UNDERSIGNED, contracting plasterers, after much experience and observation, take pleasure in testifying to the practical character of ROCK PLASTER, and while it that of plastering, we advocate its use, as it enables us to do work and guarantee the results, and enables us to carry on our trade at all seasons of the year, and modernizes that part of building enterprise which has undergone practically no improvement in the last two thousand years, placing the business of the plasterer on the same footing as that occupied by the other trades through the advent of machinery and improved methods.
